

ABSTRACT

The present invention is a computerized image-viewing device that allows the user to sequentially advance or reverse stored images by voice recognition and / or other sounds, remote control, navigational buttons or one of the many kinds of adaptable computer switches. There is a LCD or Plasma-related display screen connected to a computer box where images are stored, arranged and edited.